

The Boca Raton Theatre Guild

Our Mission 2007-2008

Involve the community at large (children, adults and senior adults) in the promotion of the study, improvement and advancement of the theater arts in South Florida:

Community is invited to join the BRTG. They could see how a play is performed, and would be given the chance to participate in all phases of the monthly workshop. Critique sessions would be a good learning tool for newcomers. Members could get involved in; directing, stage managing, joining a reading committee, suggesting a program of plays to be performed, backstage work such as prop management, costume design, set building, ushering, hostess responsibilities, arranging cast parties, stage managing.

Provide programs designed for its members to express their creativity and to display their talents in all phases of the theater:

As pointed out above, members would be privy to an array of programs where they could express their individual talents to enhance the entire creative process.

Assist in the development of all those engaged in theatrical activities:

Members would have the opportunity to learn from others in the above areas, and have "on the job" training.

Promote quality Community Theater:

Reading committees are formed to receive the best input as to the quality of incoming plays. Quality work would result from the monthly workshops and critique sessions so that only the best plays from Guild Members would qualify for production.

Produce plays and musicals:

A total of 5 productions each season are brought up to and discussed with the board. Members would have the opportunity to suggest plays they feel would not only have great audience appeal, but also be practical to produce. Two of the five productions (the July short play festival, and the November full-length OR one-act reading(s)) would be written and produced by would be from the Guild Members*

Guild members"*

Anyone who attends, at least three workshops/meeting per year OR as anyone who has active role in production can be considered a "guild member."
